WORK SAFE BC

SPEAK UP

Starting a new job is exciting, but it can also be intimidating. You want to impress your boss while at the same time get along with your co-workers. The best way to do both is to know your job and do it safely. No one wants to work with someone whose dangerous work habits could get them injured or even killed.

Make sure you learn the dangers of any new job you start or new task you're given. Ask your supervisor and co-workers about safety procedures and bring up any safety concerns right away. They'll respect you for it. And you'll do a better job knowing that you're doing it safely.

OCTOBER IS ZERO CRASH MONTH.
EVERYONE'S DRIVING SAFELY.

Drive Smart.

It's no fun if you're dead.
Slow down on the road.

It's no fun if you're dead.
Don't drink and drive.

It's no fun if you're dead.
Always buckle up.

ASK DEATH: ADVICE ON LIFE FROM DEATH

DEAR DEATH,
I've got all these flies buzzing around my apartment. But they're only attracted to my roommate. Am I ugly?
- Randall

RANDALL,
Yes. But don't worry about it. It sounds like your roommate drove after having a few drinks. So now he's a corpse and you're Adonis by comparison. Drinking and driving killed 93 young people last year in BC. It's awesome! I mean, tragic.
- Yours, Death

DEAR DEATH,
My best friend seriously reeks. It's like a herd of miniature goats sought shelter in his armpits. How do I tell him without getting smacked?
- Mike

MIKE,
I've got good news and great news. The good news: It sounds like your friend is wearing my scent, Eau de Corpse. It's not hard to come by if you run red lights. The great news: I've got another body to collect! Oh, and you don't get smacked.
- Yours, Death

DEAR DEATH,
I had this amazing trip to
